

Col. Mulligan.

Col. Mulligan before his surrender at Lexington, challenged the rebel Price to meet him on the level ground below Lexington in a fair battle, with the odds against him four to one.

The cowardly rebel leader had not even heart enough to accept the bold challenge, preferring to lie concealed behind holes of hemp till the heroic Federals in the fort should be compelled to give up for want of water to moisten their parched lips.

The whole conduct of Col. Mulligan, according to all representations, was brave and manly in his protracted and heroic defence of his position at Lexington—and when he was finally compelled to surrender it is said he wept like a child. Chicago has every reason to be proud of her brave Irish officer.—Mt. Sentinel.

A NATURAL BRIDGE IN WISCONSIN.

A correspondent of a Philadelphia paper, writing from Pine River, Wisconsin, gives the following description of a natural bridge discovered in that region:

At the mouth of the west branch of Pine river is a great curiosity—a natural bridge, almost as wonderful as the one over Cedar Creek, in Virginia. Here a stream much larger than Cedar Creek is spanned by a bridge of rock and earth, the handwork of nature herself. The west branch of Pine river flows through a most beautiful and fertile valley, and until it reaches the main stream, when a high bluff rises to forbid the blending of their waters. But "where there is a will there is a way," and the branch finds an opening through the high bluff which skirts the western shore of Pine river, and their waters mingle and run on together toward the great "Father of Waters." Here is a natural tunnel, from fifteen to twenty feet wide and twelve feet high, right through a rocky hill, whose altitude is 80 feet, and covered over with tall pines and foliaged down to both rivers with dense growth of evergreen. The bridge is wide enough for three teams to drive abreast, and from its location, I have no doubt but a thoroughfare will, at some future time, be established along this romantic way. A sufficient water passage under the bridge, even in the autumn months of July, to set a rolling and a rumbling a dozen of the largest mills in the State.

A WONDERFUL DOG.—At Aldershot camp, England, there is a large spaniel belonging to a sergeant in the Royal Artillery, who has been taught by his master, during tedious days of camp life, to perform tricks that are almost marvellous. The dog is perfect in his drill, marching slowly, quick, and at the double, in obedience to the word of command. After he had been put through his paces, his master called him up and asked his opinion of the various regiments on the ground. When the Plungers, the best corps in the army, were called, the dog said: "Silence on the part of the dog." After going over a half dozen names, the master asked, exactly in the same tone as that in which he had put his previous questions, the dog's opinion of the Royal Artillery. He instantly burst out into joyous barking, jumping about and rolling. The sergeant then called for three cheers for the King of Prussia—no sound; three cheers for the King of Naples—no sound; three cheers for the Emperor of Austria—silence again; three cheers for the Queen of England—such a volley of resounding barks followed that echoed again.

On Thursday there was a meeting of indignant Germans at St. Louis, and rumors that Blair, Scott, Cameron and Lincoln were to be burned in effigy. The meeting was held on the account of the supposed removal of Fremont.

On receipt of the news of Fremont's removal, the recruiting offices for the Fremont Light Guard were closed, and the signs torn down.

On Monday night Price evacuated Lexington with his entire force. Gen. Sturgis at the same time, crossed the river with some 5,000 to 6,000 men and in all probability is now in possession of the town. Shells were thrown at rear guard of the retreating rebels, wounding several. Price directed his steps toward Georgetown, but, hearing that Sigel and Davis had 40,000 men, changed his course, and proceeded in the direction of Independence. He has only 25,000 effective men and 15 pieces of artillery.

Col. J. A. Marshall publishes in the St. Louis papers a letter defending himself from the charge of cowardice, and appends certificates from nearly all the officers of his regiment to sustain him.

Fugitives from the rebel camps have been arriving in Washington for some days past, bringing a good deal of information concerning the position of the enemy. Two negroes report having heard conversations among the officers and Gen. Beauregard while waiting at table to the effect that the intention of the latter was to draw Gen. McClellan into action if possible; and they gathered that the strength of the rebels before Washington was 100,000. Gen. Johnston they knew had left Manassas, but for what point they were ignorant, until they heard in Washington that he was reported to be at Leesburg, which they say is very probably true.
